

Core brief

Tuesday, 18 July 2017

Introduction

This issue provides information on a glazing incident at the QEUH.

Queen Elizabeth University Hospital glazing incident

This afternoon, one of the glass panels from level 5 of the hospital became dislodged and fell onto the ground in an area adjacent to the discharge lounge.

This area has previously been cordoned off and no-one was harmed in the incident.

Colleagues will be aware that a small number of panes have now become damaged. No common cause has been established.

We take this issue seriously and are working closely with both the main contractor, Multiplex, and with an independent glazing expert to assess the damage and potential causes.

Our Health and Safety experts are also on site to ensure that the area affected remains safe for patients, staff and the public.

Are your contact details up-to-date? Click here to check