

Core brief

Tuesday, 05 March 2019

Introduction

This issue brings the announcement of the co-chairs of for the QEUH review.

Announcement from the Scottish Government on the co-chairs for Queen Elizabeth University Hospital review

Health Secretary Jeane Freeman has announced two co-chairs to lead the independent review into the design, commissioning, construction, handover and maintenance of Glasgow's Queen Elizabeth Hospital.

Ms Freeman said: "I am pleased to announce that Dr Brian Montgomery, former Medical Director and interim Chief Executive of NHS Fife and Dr Andrew Fraser, Director of Public Health Science, NHS Health Scotland, have confirmed that they will act as co-chairs of the Independent Review.

"The Scottish Government will provide a further update to Parliament detailing the remit of the review once Drs Fraser and Montgomery have considered their approach to the review, which will follow the principles outlined in Professor Alison Britton's report into the handling of independent reviews in Scotland."

Are your contact details up-to-date? Click here to check