Introduction

This issue brings tells you about a Small Change Matters survey and a statutory mandatory health and safety training module.

Small Change Matters

Our organisation has a good track record of identifying new and improved ways of working and of reducing duplication and waste.

We launched Small Change Matters last year and received hundreds of suggestions from colleagues of ways to tackle waste and avoid duplication.

Small Change Matters is returning for a second year and we want to find out what you think of the scheme and how we can make it easy for you to take part.

All completed questionnaires will be entered in a prize draw for a chance to win £50.

Health & Safety, an introduction - statutory mandatory module

We aim to provide effective and high quality health & safety training and education to our staff to enable you to fulfil your duty of care to yourself and others while delivering the best and safest possible healthcare for patients.

Our vision is to provide excellence in all aspects of our service, reducing work related accidents, ill health and injury to you and our patients, year on year, by creating a positive health and safety culture across NMSGGC.

Undertaking this module will enable you to understand your own individual responsibilities and what is expected of you in order to ensure you contribute to the safety of your workplace.
